Nuffield Department of Clinical Medicine (NDM) …fostering your career in science

The Nuffield Department of Clinical Medicine (NDM) is one of the largest departments of the University of Oxford and is part of the Medical Sciences Division, with responsibility for a significant part of the teaching of clinical students within the Medical School.

NDM has significant financial turnover and complexity, resulting from its diverse research portfolio, its geographical spread and its close links with NHS funding and strategic teams involved in the development and delivery of increasingly integrated clinical research platforms. Oxford Big Data Institute

The Big Data Institute (BDI) is a state-of-the-art building at Oxford University's Old Road Campus. When it opens in early 2017, this interdisciplinary research centre will focus on the analysis of large, complex, heterogeneous data sets for research into the causes and consequences, prevention and treatment of disease. To this end, BDI researchers will develop, evaluate and deploy efficient methods for acquiring and analysing information for large clinical research studies. These approaches will be invaluable in identifying the associations between lifestyle exposures, genetic variants, infections and health outcomes around the globe.

Research will be conducted in 4 general themes: genomics, population health, infectious disease surveillance, and methodology (including informatics, statistics, and engineering). Big Data methods could transform the scale (breadth, depth and duration) and efficiency (data accumulation, storage, processing and dissemination) of large-scale clinical research. The work of the BDI requires people and projects that span traditional departmental boundaries and scientific disciplines, supported by technical resources to handle the vast quantities of data they generate.

Under the leadership of Professor Gil McVean (Director) and Professor Martin Landray (Deputy Director), the BDI will comprise around 350 researchers (approx. 30 research groups) drawn from a wide range of departments and will form an analytical hub, deeply connected to the wider experimental and clinical community in Oxford and beyond.

For more information please visit: http://www.bdi.ox.ac.uk/

Overview of the role

This is an exciting opportunity to join the new Big Data Institute (BDI), based at the University of Oxford. Research at the BDI will be focussed on analysis of biomedical big data, and generation of health knowledge and information. The post holder will be based in the BDI, reporting to the Senior Research Manager in the BDI. The grant Principal Investigator (PI) is Professor Simon Hay based at the Institute for Health Metrics and Evaluation (IHME), University of Washington, Seattle, WA, USA. Professor Alan Lopez, Director of the IHME-BDI Strategic Partnership, is based at the University of Melbourne, Australia, and makes quarterly visits to the BDI.

The Global Burden of Disease - Antimicrobial Resistance (AMR) project is a collaborative grant funded by the UK Department of Health and Social Care, the Wellcome Trust and the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation. The grant is in partnership with the Institute for Health Metrics and Evaluation (IHME), University of Washington. The purpose of the grant is to collect and synthesise data on the burden of disease associated with AMR and ensure that this data is included in the Global Burden of Disease study (GBD). Ultimately this will increase global awareness of AMR and drug resistant infections (DRI) and drive support for strategies that can reduce AMR/DRI.

The Personal Assistant will provide support to senior members of the management team and liaise with a variety of administrative and academic staff at the University of Oxford and with collaborators worldwide, to ensure administration for meetings, visitors, travel, recruitment, and grant financial matters is carried out efficiently, with attention to detail and by the required deadlines.
