The role

The post holder will be responsible for supporting the development of translational research activity using computational modelling approaches by the NIHR¹ Oxford Health Biomedical Research Centre (BRC). The Oxford Health BRC provides infrastructure (posts, equipment, consumables) to support experimental medicine and related research studies. The initial focus will be on the development of novel measures relevant to the assessment and treatment of psychiatric disorders. Key methods include modelling of behavioural, cognitive and physiological processes, using data collected from both patient and non-clinical human populations.

The post holder will report to the computational psychiatry subtheme lead (Michael Browning).

The ideal candidate will have experience of applying computational modelling approaches to questions relevant to mental health, and will be able to generate innovative solutions to problems through the application of specialist know-how. They will have experience of running and analysing studies relevant to mental health in human populations. They will have experience of coding and data analysis generally as well as the development and coding of online cognitive tasks or measures.

Responsibilities

- Support the translation of pre-clinical computational measures and their collection in clinical populations across the Oxford Health BRC, and from the depression therapeutic theme.
- Develop and maintain simple, clinic ready online cognitive measures, and their associated analysis pipelines, to be routinely collected from patients in research clinics within the Oxford Health BRC and at other sites.
- Serve as first port of call for researchers and clinicians seeking advice about computational analysis within the Oxford Health BRC. Oversee the day-to-day running of ongoing research projects, ensuring adherence to protocols and timelines. Take a lead role in the planning, approval, and execution of future projects.
- Help supervise students and visiting researchers carrying out projects.
- Present and write up data from studies for publication
- Play a key role in public engagement activities related to the work of the theme
- Identify additional opportunities and requirements to enhance the Oxford Health BRC, helping develop research questions, secure external funding, and shape the future plans of these.

Selection criteria

Essential selection criteria

- Have or be close to completion of a PhD in clinical or cognitive neuroscience, psychology or related discipline.
- Experience in the use of computational modelling approaches to address questions of clinical interest and the ability to able to generate innovative solutions to problems through the application of specialist know-how
- Proven ability to develop and code new psychological paradigms, including online cognitive tasks
- Excellent data analysis skills, including experience of developing analysis scripts and training others in their use
- Ability to independently plan and manage a research project.
- Experience of running and analysing studies relevant to mental health in human populations
- Excellent interpersonal and communication skills and experience of working in an interdisciplinary area.

Desirable selection criteria

- Experience of experimental medicine studies, particularly those related to mental health
- Experience of collecting and analysing neuroimaging data (e.g. fMRI, MEG etc).
- Experience of data collection, analysis or management of multi-site studies
- Interest and/or expertise in psychiatric disorders.
- Experience of external grant submission and contribution to scientific papers.

Pre-employment screening

Standard checks

If you are offered the post, the offer will be subject to standard pre-employment checks. You will be asked to provide: proof of your right-to-work in the UK; proof of your identity; and (if we haven't done so already) we will contact the referees you have nominated. You will also be asked to complete a health declaration so that you can tell us about any health conditions or disabilities for which you may need us to make appropriate adjustments.

Please read the candidate notes on the University's pre-employment screening procedures at:

<https://www.jobs.ox.ac.uk/pre-employment-checks>

Hazard-specific / Safety-critical duties

This job includes hazards or safety-critical activities. If you are offered the post, you will be asked to complete a health questionnaire which will be assessed by our Occupational Health Service, and the offer of employment will be subject to a successful outcome of this assessment.

The hazards or safety-critical duties involved are as follows:

- Work in clinical areas with direct contact with patients (NOT administrative roles)

Additional security pre-employment checks

This job includes duties that will require additional security pre-employment checks:

- A satisfactory enhanced Disclosure and Barring Service check due to regulated activity involving 'at risk' adults

About the University of Oxford

Welcome to the University of Oxford. We aim to lead the world in research and education for the benefit of society both in the UK and globally. Oxford's researchers engage with academic, commercial and cultural partners across the world to stimulate high-quality research and enable innovation through a broad range of social, policy and economic impacts.

We believe our strengths lie both in empowering individuals and teams to address fundamental questions of global significance, while providing all our staff with a welcoming and inclusive workplace that enables everyone to develop and do their best work. Recognising that diversity is our strength, vital for innovation and creativity, we aspire to build a truly diverse community which values and respects every individual's unique contribution.
