The role

This is an exciting opportunity to join a large and thriving academic department with three hosted globally-renowned research centres, and which leads several cross-university research networks. The School of Geography and the Environment (SoGE) is a stimulating and varied working environment and the Head of HR plays a key role in supporting the Head of Administration and Finance (HAF) and Head of School (HoS) across both operational and strategic HR.

An experienced HR professional, you will have outstanding organisational skills, excellent written and oral communication skills, and a demonstrable understanding of the importance of effective HR management in an academic, research-intensive environment. You will be required to deliver effective, pragmatic, and solutions-based support while ensuring compliance with University-wide standards and legislation. A flexible and self-motivated approach will be key to the success of this new role. While a collaborative approach will be a key feature of the role, the post holder will also be required to work independently, proactively taking the lead in initiatives and exercising sound judgement and discretion in a complex environment.

The role combines strategic and operational responsibilities and you will require an innovative approach to developing new ideas which enhance the efficient and effective management of the HR team within SoGE. You will manage a generalist HR team ensuring that a professional and proactive HR service is delivered within University guidelines. The team currently consists of an HR Operations Manager, EDI Manager, two HR Officers and an HR Assistant.

The Head of HR will be responsible for overseeing a wide range of activity including; organisational change, recruitment and selection procedures, induction, development, grading and remuneration and general issues relating to employment law.

You will be expected to acquire a thorough understanding of the University's procedures including its statutes and regulations in order to deliver creative solutions to unstructured problems, and fostering constructive working relationships across a diverse department.

Responsibilities

The Head of HR is responsible for both operational and strategic/policy personnel management in SoGE, providing high level HR support on a range of issues across the Department and leading the SoGE HR Team.

Operational

- Supported by the HR Operations Manager deliver high-level operational management and oversight across the full range of Personnel management in SoGE.
- Line management of the HR Operations Manager and the EDI manager

- Ensure that the day-to-day running of SoGE's HR team is managed effectively. This will include oversight of and accountability for, amongst other things: Recruitment; Training, Learning and Development; Employee Engagement and Relations; Performance and Reward, HR Service Delivery, Organisational Development, Discipline and Grievance, as well as advice on the interpretation of university personnel policy on matters such as equal opportunities.
- Supported by the HR Operations Manager, work with the HR team to review existing processes and procedures across the employee life cycle, streamlining and improving processes where possible to ensure an efficient service to the department and access to and sharing of information within the HR Team.
- Working closely with the HAF, taking the lead on individual employee cases including absence management, performance management, change management, capability and workplace conduct and ensure compliance with both employment legislation and University policy.
- Work closely with the Social Sciences HR BP Team Leader, and other senior colleagues as required, on the management of complex or high-risk cases, including employment tribunals.
- Support the HR Operations Manager in the management and implementation of key employment lifecycle policies and procedures such as sickness absence, annual leave, family leave and fixed term contracts etc. and ensure that these are effectively communicated within the department.
- Offer professional HR guidance to the HAF and HoS on a range of non-standard issues.
- Attendance at Employment Tribunals may, on occasions, be required. The HR team has access to, and works closely with, an in-house employment law service.

Strategic

- Lead SoGE's HR services in order to support the achievement of SoGE's strategic objectives, focussing on developing the strategies, policies and practises that will deliver the HR objective to develop a competent, confident and highly motivated workforce.
- Understand SoGE's business objectives and provide HR support and advice as necessary to achieve those objectives, and manage any associated risks.

- Contribute to the development and review of operational personnel policies and procedures at departmental, divisional and University level.
- Contribute to regular training and briefing sessions for managers.
- Working closely with the SoGE HAF, HoS, and other senior academic colleagues, oversee the development and delivery of an effective HR strategy and support service in the department.
- Working closely with the SoGE HAF, HoS and other senior academic colleagues, advise and influence the behaviours of managers within SoGE to ensure that professional staff management practices are consistently applied across the department.
- Play a key role in the management of change within SoGE, specifically involvement in the Athena SWAN initiative and being part of the Equality and Diversity and Inclusion (EDI) Committee, taking forward recommendations for implementation in the Action Plan.
- Support in developing and implementing a range of EDI related projects, examples of which include further developing and implementing the departmental personal development review (PDR) scheme and developing a staff induction scheme which is suitable for a range of staff, and in line with the code of practice for career development of research staff.
- Offer professional line management to the Departmental Equality, Diversity and Inclusion Manager and support the delivery of the School's Athena Swan action plan.
- Manage HR projects and initiatives and be a key contributor to SoGE's strategic plan, working collaboratively with other colleagues as appropriate.

Selection criteria

Essential selection criteria

- CIPD post graduate qualification or equivalent, or working towards such a qualification.
- Wide experience and proven track record of advising at all levels on the full range of staffing issues in a complex organisation (ideally within a unionised environment).
- Experience of managing HR services and an HR Team in a complex organisation.

- Demonstrable sound judgement in HR matters with a thorough and up-to-date knowledge of employment law allied with a keen awareness of the wider implications of specific HR matters in the context of an academic environment

School of Geography and the Environment

The School of Geography and the Environment (SoGE) is a dynamic, diverse, interdisciplinary department at the University of Oxford combining natural and social science research interests and analytical skills, underpinned by geography's tradition of working in many different situations and contexts. The School is internationally recognized for the quality of its teaching, research and wider engagement across the breadth of human geography, physical geography and environmental studies. Based within the Social Sciences Division, the School incorporates three affiliated research centres as well as Geography: the Environmental Change Institute (ECI), the Smith School of Enterprise and Environment (SSEE), and the Transport Studies Unit (TSU).

The School is based partly within the Oxford University Centre for the Environment (OUCE) building and partly in the Dyson Perrins building, which was completely refurbished in 2022. The School's physical location enables us to easily connect with many academic departments and organisations across the University, and we collaborate with many of them. For example, the School is an active participant in fostering the Oxford University Networks for the Environment (ONE), which links up over 1000 individuals within the University around the themes of Biodiversity, Climate, Energy, Food and Water.

Our research spans issues related to the environment, climate change, energy, transport, development, geopolitics and cities. The School's research portfolio totalled approximately £105million across more than 170 research projects in 2021/22, from a wide variety of funders. Much of this work is collaborative, and we currently estimate that research with our partners takes place in over 70 countries across the globe. We aim to contribute to the common good, and many of our researchers actively engage in advising local, national and international organisations; in giving written and oral contributions to government consultations both locally and nationally; and in engaging with others through policy, partnerships, business and social enterprise.

The School also provides world-class, multidisciplinary teaching. Our Undergraduate Honour School gives undergraduate students research-led teaching across the breadth of human and physical geography and environmental studies by internationally recognised academic staff. Two hundred and fifty graduate students from a wide range of nationalities currently study for taught and research postgraduate degrees with us, in our International Graduate School. For more information the School please visit: <http://www.geog.ox.ac.uk>

The School is committed to supporting the career development of all its members. Everyone is encouraged to undertake professional training from the range offered by the School, the Division and the University's People, Organisation and Development Unit. The School has a mentoring scheme and all staff are encouraged to work with a mentor during their time at SoGE; academic staff are also encouraged to have regular meetings with the Head of School to plan their career progression.

Since 1973 the Transport Studies Unit has established an international research reputation in transport research. Based within the world-leading School of Geography and the Environment at the University of Oxford, the TSU approaches global transport challenges from social science and holistic perspectives. By advancing understandings of the systems, processes and practices that shape the way people and goods move, the TSU hopes to inspire and inform change towards a more sustainable, just and accessible transport system. Our position within Geography and the University fosters interdisciplinary collaboration with researchers in other parts of the University and based elsewhere.

From geography to engineering, energy research to science and technology studies, and beyond, the TSU draws on the latest relevant developments in various disciplines and research fields. Our core team of researchers come from various disciplinary backgrounds, bringing with them a range of insight and expertise which enriches our research practice. Most TSU staff are full-time researchers working on specific externally funded projects. In addition to the core staff, it also hosts a number of academic visitors working more independently on cross-cutting issues. There is also an active group of international DPhil students working with individual staff.

The TSU has an excellent track record in collaborative projects. TSU researchers often work in partnership with colleagues in many UK universities, and has very active and well-established links with universities and research institutes across the EU, the Americas, Asia and Africa. They also work with partners from international agencies, transport policymakers, local authorities, businesses and industry, employers, non-governmental organisations, and activists.

For more information on the TSU please visit: <http://www.tsu.ox.ac.uk>

Since 1991, the Environmental Change Institute has worked alongside partners in government, business, academia and the community to understand environmental change and explore possible responses to the risks and opportunities it poses. Promoting an interdisciplinary approach, ECI explores sustainable solutions to global problems ensuring a fairer and more equal world for people today and in the future.

ECI has over 100 academics and researchers working around the world, establishing itself as an active and influential player in environmental change science. With a well-established track record in relation to Infrastructure, climate, energy, ecosystems, food, land use governance and water.

ECI is a leading player in a number of large research activities. In 2022 there are over 80 research projects totalling over £57 million funded through the UK's research councils and charitable foundations and trusts. We are proud of all our work but of particular note we host the multi-agency UK Centre for Research into Energy Demand Solutions (CREDS), understanding the role of energy demand change in accelerating the transition to a zero carbon energy system. As part of Oxford University's strategic research Oxford Net Zero is an interdisciplinary research initiative working to track progress, align standards and inform effective solutions in climate science, law, policy, economics, clean energy, transport, land and food systems and greenhouse gas removal and storage.

In addition, The Oxford Programme for Sustainable Infrastructure Systems (OPSIS) is at the forefront of research and education to enable sustainable and resilient infrastructure. While the Leverhulme Centre for Nature Recovery Centre aims to investigate how to halt and reverse ongoing nature and biodiversity loss, by understanding how implement and finance nature recovery that is scalable, effective and socially just.

The ECI is also home to the MSc in Environmental Change and Management, the School's first taught postgraduate masters 'programme, established in 1994. Through this MSc the ECI have successfully trained over 700 upcoming environmental leaders who comprise a lively and increasingly influential alumni community. For more information on the ECI please visit:

The Smith School of Enterprise and the Environment (SSEE) was established at the University of Oxford in 2008 with a generous benefaction by the Smith family. We bring enterprise – public and private - together with world-leading teaching and research to achieve global net-zero emissions and sustainable development. Located within the internationally top-ranked School of Geography and the Environment, we work in close collaboration with leading academics across Oxford and beyond.

Decisions made this decade will determine the future of humanity and the planet. To stop the climate crisis, we need to shift global economic and financial systems towards sustainability. The Smith School's approach combines academic excellence with real-world impact. Our research shapes business and government policy and practice. We offer innovative evidence-based solutions to the environmental challenges facing humanity.

We apply expertise in economics, finance, business and law to tackle environmental and social challenges in six areas: water, climate, energy, biodiversity, food and the regenerative economy.

We equip the next generation through undergraduate and graduate teaching as part of the top-ranked School of Geography and the Environment. SSEE's new master's course in Sustainability, Enterprise and the Environment \(MSc SEE\) is already one of the most applied to at Oxford. Our executive education programmes empower business leaders and policy-makers throughout the world to take action.

SSEE's Advisory Board, Business Fellows and our wide-ranging external partnerships bring together experts from industry, consultancy, governments and NGOs to achieve the vision of a cleaner, fairer and more prosperous future

Social Science Division

The University's academic departments and faculties are organised into four large groups, known as Academic Divisions (Social Sciences, Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences (MPLS), Medical Sciences, and Humanities). The academic divisions are responsible for academic oversight of the teaching and research of their constituent departments and faculties, for strategic and operational planning, and for personnel and resource management. The Head of the Social Sciences Division is Professor Timothy Power, who is a member of the University's Council. The Social Sciences Division is a world-leading centre of research and education in the social sciences. The social sciences at Oxford are distinctive for both their depth and breadth, with activity spanning fourteen departments and faculties and one cross-divisional unit. (These are as follows: Law, the Saïd Business School, Economics, Politics and International Relations, the Blavatnik School of Government, the School of Anthropology and Museum Ethnography, International Development, Sociology, Social Policy and Intervention, the Oxford Internet Institute, Archaeology, the School of Interdisciplinary Area Studies, Education, the School of Geography and the Environment and the Oxford Martin School.) Interdisciplinary links within and beyond the university are strong, extending to the humanities, natural sciences, and medical sciences.

Academic and research staff and research students are engaged in world-leading research that challenges current ideas and theories and is tackling some of the major challenges facing humanity, such as sustainable resource management, migration, governance, poverty and development, and justice. REF 2021 confirmed Oxford as the UK powerhouse for research in the social sciences, where Oxford accounted for more world-leading (4*) research than any other institution, across the social sciences units of assessment to which it made submissions. The division has an extensive portfolio of external funders and collaborators, with competitively-awarded external research income exceeding £40million per year. Researchers in the division engage actively beyond academia and their research has influence in many spheres from innovation in public policymaking to practitioner communities such as law, business, education, social welfare and NGOs.

The division also delivers an exceptional range of high quality educational programmes (undergraduate, postgraduate taught and postgraduate research), all of which are underpinned by the innovative research being undertaken by our academics. Programmes range from those at the interface of the natural sciences, through to professionally-oriented provision in areas such as business, law and education. The division is home to several of Oxford's most widely recognised teaching programmes, such as Philosophy, Politics and Economics (PPE); the BCL; the MPhils in International Relations, in Economics, and in Development Studies; the MBA and EMBA; and the nationally regarded PGCE.
