The role

The Oxford Sustainable Law Programme (SLP) is looking for a talented, collaborative, and entrepreneurial Programme Manager to join the team. It is an exciting role at the centre of a rapidly growing team that operates at the intersection of legal and sustainability issues.

Through strategic partnerships, research, and engagement, the SLP leverages innovative, rigorous, multidisciplinary, independent, and decision-relevant research and education to advance a just and sustainable world for people and nature. The Programme is a world-leading centre of expertise on aligning the operation of the law with the achievement of sustainability outcomes. The team is made up of impact-oriented thinkers who see the law as a tool to catalyse the sustainability transition. We draw on wide-ranging expertise from across the University of Oxford and collaborate intensively with our international partners in the academic, public, private, and not-for-profit sectors. The Programme is a joint initiative of Oxford's Faculty of Law and the Smith School of Enterprise and the Environment, and it is part of the University's broader sustainability ecosystem and has close collaborations with the Blavatnik School of Government, Oxford Net Zero, the Oxford Martin School, and the Environmental Change Institute, amongst others.

The crucial new role of Programme Manager is designed to enable the SLP's team to meet its full potential. It is an opportunity to join and help build a dynamic, entrepreneurial, and international team, and to contribute directly to the continued professionalisation, growth, and global impact of the Programme.

Based out of the Smith School of Enterprise and the Environment, and reporting to the Programme's Director (Dr Thom Wetzler) in close collaboration with the Programme's workstream leads, the post-holder will be responsible for the day-to-day operations of the programme (supported by, and working together with, administrative officers at the SLP and elsewhere in the University) as well as helping to coordinate the Programme's multidisciplinary and global team of engaged researchers and practitioners and forging strong relationships with senior internal and external stakeholders. The post-holder will contribute to the formulation of the Programme's strategy, take charge of the operationalisation and implementation of that strategy, and oversee project management to ensure project plans are delivered to a high standard. The post-holder will also provide operational leadership and support in the development and execution of the Programme's educational courses (especially Executive Education, Judicial Training, and Online Education courses). In carrying out the duties of the post, the post-holder will collaborate successfully with colleagues in SSEE and SoGE, as well as in the Faculty of Law, the Blavatnik School of Government, Oxford Net Zero, the Oxford Martin School, in administration, IT, HR and finance on different aspects of this varied role.

Responsibilities

- Oversee programme management and operations, coordinating across the team
- Operationalising and executing programme strategy, including tracking activities across the programme
- Project management, including following up actions from meetings and ensuring plans are delivered on time and in line with University and Programme policies, as well as designing and implementing project management processes
- Account management, including managing and maintaining relationships with senior partners and stakeholders within and outside the University
- Financial management, budgeting, and assisting with the development of funding applications
- Report writing, both for funders as well as for policy and practitioner audiences
- Providing operational leadership and support in the development and execution of the Programme's educational programmes.

- Communications: act as a first point-of-contact for external enquiries and triage request and inquiries across the team; coordinate with relevant team members to produce content for the website and social media, ensuring that the project's online presence is kept up-to-date with news, events, research, media activity, profiles etc.; manage communications with stakeholders on key issues; draft press releases working closely with the SSEE communications team
- Events: plan and support events, working closely with the SLP administrative support officers and the SSEE events team as well as other such teams across the University
- Support the leadership team in managing the Programme and other duties that are commensurate with the grade of this role, including day-to-day line management of the SLP's administrative support staff

Selection criteria

Essential selection criteria

- Educated to degree level or equivalent.
- Clear interest in the work of the SLP, willingness to learn more about the topics the Programme covers, and ability to confidently represent the programme externally
- A minimum of 18 months experience of leadership, administration, or project management in an academic research, private sector, or public sector environment, or other large complex organisation.
- Excellent interpersonal skills, able to build effective and cooperative working relationships with colleagues and project partners at all levels.
- Excellent oral, written communication and presentation skills and attention to detail.
- Proven financial aptitude with a high level of attention to detail and the ability to produce clear and concise reports for funders.
- Highly organised, self-motivated and resilient, with the ability to independently prioritise work and produce accurate, detailed work and meet deadlines.
- Commitment to advancing diversity and inclusion.

Desirable selection criteria

- Expertise in law, policy, or other topics in which SLP works.
- Evidence of an interest in law and sustainability.
- Previous experience of working in a research or professional services environment.
- Previous experience of supporting and developing applications for research funding, account management, and strategy operationalisation.
- Experience of maintaining websites and using a content management system and of using social media (Twitter & LinkedIn) ideally in a professional context.
- Evidence of previous experience in overseeing and supporting (world-leading) educational and research programmes.

Pre-employment screening

Standard checks

If you are offered the post, the offer will be subject to standard pre-employment checks. You will be asked to provide: proof of your right-to-work in the UK; proof of your identity; and (if we haven't done so already) we will contact the referees you have nominated. You will also be asked to complete a health declaration so that you can tell us about any health conditions or disabilities for which you may need us to make appropriate adjustments.

About the University of Oxford

Welcome to the University of Oxford. We aim to lead the world in research and education for the benefit of society both in the UK and globally. Oxford's researchers engage with academic, commercial and cultural partners across the world to stimulate high-quality research and enable innovation through a broad range of social, policy and economic impacts.

We believe our strengths lie both in empowering individuals and teams to address fundamental questions of global significance, while providing all our staff with a welcoming and inclusive workplace that enables everyone to develop and do their best work. Recognising that diversity is our strength, vital for innovation and creativity, we aspire to build a truly diverse community which values and respects every individual's unique contribution.

While we have long traditions of scholarship, we are also forward-looking, creative and cutting-edge. Oxford is one of Europe's most entrepreneurial universities and we rank first in the UK for university spin-outs, and in recent years we have spun out 15-20 new companies every year. We are also recognised as leaders in support for social enterprise.

Join us and you will find a unique, democratic and international community, a great range of staff benefits and access to a vibrant array of cultural activities in the beautiful city of Oxford. For more information, please visit www.ox.ac.uk/about/organisation.

School of Geography and the Environment

The School of Geography and the Environment (SoGE) is a dynamic, diverse, interdisciplinary department at the University of Oxford combining natural and social science research interests and analytical skills, underpinned by geography's tradition of working in many different situations and contexts. The School is internationally recognized for the quality of its teaching, research and wider engagement across the breadth of human geography, physical geography and environmental studies. Based within the Social Sciences Division, the School incorporates three affiliated research centres as well as Geography: the Environmental Change Institute (ECI), the Smith School of Enterprise and Environment (SSEE), and the Transport Studies Unit (TSU).

The School is based partly within the Oxford University Centre for the Environment (OUCE) building and partly in the Dyson Perrins building, which was completely refurbished in 2022. The School's physical location enables us to easily connect with many academic departments and organisations across the University, and we collaborate with many of them.

For example, the School is an active participant in fostering the Oxford University Networks for the Environment (ONE), which links up over 1000 individuals within the University around the themes of Biodiversity, Climate, Energy, Food and Water.

Our research spans issues related to the environment, climate change, energy, transport, development, geopolitics and cities. The School's research portfolio totalled approximately £105million across more than 170 research projects in 2021/22, from a wide variety of funders.

Much of this work is collaborative, and we currently estimate that research with our partners takes place in over 70 countries across the globe. We aim to contribute to the common good, and many of our researchers actively engage in advising local, national and international organisations; in giving written and oral contributions to government consultations both locally and nationally; and in engaging with others through policy, partnerships, business and social enterprise.

The School also provides world-class, multidisciplinary teaching. Our Undergraduate Honour School gives undergraduate students research-led teaching across the breadth of human and physical geography and environmental studies by internationally recognised academic staff. Two hundred and fifty graduate students from a wide range of nationalities currently study for taught and research postgraduate degrees with us, in our International Graduate School. For more information the School please visit: <http://www.geog.ox.ac.uk>

The School is committed to supporting the career development of all its members. Everyone is encouraged to undertake professional training from the range offered by the School, the Division and the University's People, Organisation and Development Unit. The School has a mentoring scheme and all staff are encouraged to work with a mentor during their time at SoGE; academic staff are also encouraged to have regular meetings with the Head of School to plan their career progression.

Since 1973 the Transport Studies Unit has established an international research reputation in transport research. Based within the world-leading School of Geography and the Environment at the University of Oxford, the TSU approaches global transport challenges from social science and holistic perspectives. By advancing understandings of the systems, processes and practices that shape the way people and goods move, the TSU hopes to inspire and inform change towards a more sustainable, just and accessible transport system. Our position within Geography and the University fosters interdisciplinary collaboration with researchers in other parts of the University and based elsewhere.

From geography to engineering, energy research to science and technology studies, and beyond, the TSU draws on the latest relevant developments in various disciplines and research fields. Our core team of researchers come from various disciplinary backgrounds, bringing with them a range of insight and expertise which enriches our research practice. Most TSU staff are full-time researchers working on specific externally funded projects. In addition to the core staff, it also hosts a number of academic visitors working more independently on cross-cutting issues. There is also an active group of international DPhil students working with individual staff.

The TSU has an excellent track record in collaborative projects. TSU researchers often works in partnership with colleagues in many UK universities, and has very active and well-established links with universities and research institutes across the EU, the Americas, Asia and Africa. They also work with partners from international agencies, transport policymakers, local authorities, businesses and industry, employers, non-governmental organisations, and activists.

For more information on the TSU please visit: <http://www.tsu.ox.ac.uk>

Since 1991, the Environmental Change Institute has worked alongside partners in government, business, academia and the community to understand environmental change and explore possible responses to the risks and opportunities it poses. Promoting an interdisciplinary approach, ECI explores sustainable solutions to global problems ensuring a fairer and more equal world for people today and in the future.

ECI has over 100 academics and researchers working around the world, establishing itself as an active and influential player in environmental change science. With a well-established track record in relation to Infrastructure, climate, energy, ecosystems, food, land use governance and water.

ECI is a leading player in a number of large research activities. In 2022 there are over 80 research projects totalling over £57 million funded through the UK's research councils and charitable foundations and trusts. We are proud of all our work but of particular note we host the multi-agency UK Centre for Research into Energy Demand Solutions (CREDS), understanding the role of energy demand change in accelerating the transition to a zero carbon energy system. As part of Oxford University's strategic research Oxford Net Zero is an interdisciplinary research initiative working to track progress, align standards and inform effective solutions in climate science, law, policy, economics, clean energy, transport, land and food systems and greenhouse gas removal and storage.

In addition, The Oxford Programme for Sustainable Infrastructure Systems (OPSIS) is at the forefront of research and education to enable sustainable and resilient infrastructure. While the Leverhulme Centre for Nature Recovery Centre aims to investigate how to halt and reverse ongoing nature and biodiversity loss, by understanding how implement and finance nature recovery that is scalable, effective and socially just.

The ECI is also home to the MSc in Environmental Change and Management, the School's first taught postgraduate masters 'programme, established in 1994. Through this MSc the ECI have successfully trained over 700 upcoming environmental leaders who comprise a lively and increasingly influential alumni community. For more information on the ECI please visit: <http://www.eci.ox.ac.uk>

The Smith School of Enterprise and the Environment (SSEE) was established at the University of Oxford in 2008 with a generous benefaction by the Smith family. We bring enterprise – public and private - together with world-leading teaching and research to achieve global net-zero emissions and sustainable development. Located within the internationally top-ranked School of Geography and the Environment, we work in close collaboration with leading academics across Oxford and beyond.

Decisions made this decade will determine the future of humanity and the planet. To stop the climate crisis, we need to shift global economic and financial systems towards sustainability. The Smith School's approach combines academic excellence with real-world impact. Our research shapes business and government policy and practice. We offer innovative evidence-based solutions to the environmental challenges facing humanity.

We apply expertise in economics, finance, business and law to tackle environmental and social challenges in six areas: water, climate, energy, biodiversity, food and the regenerative economy.

We equip the next generation through undergraduate and graduate teaching as part of the top-ranked School of Geography and the Environment. SSEE's new master's course in Sustainability, Enterprise and the Environment \(MSc SEE\) is already one of the most applied to at Oxford. Our executive education programmes empower business leaders and policy-makers throughout the world to take action.

SSEE's Advisory Board, Business Fellows and our wide-ranging external partnerships bring together experts from industry, consultancy, governments and NGOs to achieve the vision of a cleaner, fairer and more prosperous future

Social Science Division

The University's academic departments and faculties are organised into four large groups, known as Academic Divisions (Social Sciences, Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences (MPLS), Medical Sciences, and Humanities). The academic divisions are responsible for academic oversight of the teaching and research of their constituent departments and faculties, for strategic and operational planning, and for personnel and resource management. The Head of the Social Sciences Division is Professor Timothy Power, who is a member of the University's Council. The Social Sciences Division is a world-leading centre of research and education in the social sciences. The social sciences at Oxford are distinctive for both their depth and breadth, with activity spanning fourteen departments and faculties and one cross-divisional unit. (These are as follows: Law, the Saïd Business School, Economics, Politics and International Relations, the Blavatnik School of Government, the School of Anthropology and Museum Ethnography, International Development, Sociology, Social Policy and Intervention, the Oxford Internet Institute, Archaeology, the School of Interdisciplinary Area Studies, Education, the School of Geography and the Environment and the Oxford Martin School.) Interdisciplinary links within and beyond the university are strong, extending to the humanities, natural sciences, and medical sciences.

Academic and research staff and research students are engaged in world-leading research that challenges current ideas and theories and is tackling some of the major challenges facing humanity, such as sustainable resource management, migration, governance, poverty and development, and justice. REF 2014 confirmed Oxford as the UK powerhouse for research in the social sciences, where Oxford accounted for more world-leading (4*) research than any other institution, across the social sciences units of assessment to which it made submissions. The division has an extensive portfolio of external funders and collaborators, with competitively-awarded external research income exceeding £40million per year. Researchers in the division engage actively beyond academia and their research has influence in many spheres from innovation in public policymaking to practitioner communities such as law, business, education, social welfare and NGOs.

The division also delivers an exceptional range of high quality educational programmes (undergraduate, postgraduate taught and postgraduate research), all of which are underpinned by the innovative research being undertaken by our academics. Programmes range from those at the interface of the natural sciences, through to professionally-oriented provision in areas such as business, law and education. The division is home to several of Oxford's most widely recognised teaching programmes, such as Philosophy, Politics and Economics (PPE); the BCL; the MPhils in International Relations, in Economics, and in Development Studies; the MBA and EMBA; and the nationally regarded PGCE.
