

Job Description and Selection Criteria

Post	Associate Professorship in Global and Area Studies
Department/Faculty	Oxford School of Global and Area Studies
Division	Social Sciences Division
College	St Antony's College
Contract type	Permanent upon completion of a successful review. The review is conducted during the first 5 years.
Salary	Grade 10a (36S) Salary from £55,755 to £74,867 per annum plus additional benefits and allowances. An additional allowance of £3,155 p.a. would be payable upon award of Full Professor title. St Antony's College offers a housing allowance, currently £2,871 per annum; increasing in line with cost of living awards.
Additional Information	Oxford School of Global and Area Studies (OSGA) is committed to promoting a culture of equality, diversity, and inclusion in the workplace and is determined to foster an academic environment in which everyone is respected and empowered to fulfil their potential. Applications are particularly welcome and encouraged from women, black, and minority ethnic candidates, who are under-represented in academic posts in Oxford.

Overview of the post

The Oxford School of Global and Area Studies (OSGA), and St Antony's College seek to recruit an Associate Professor in Global and Area Studies (GAS). The post is an exciting and demanding one in which the successful candidate will undertake advanced, internationally excellent research in Global and Area Studies; teach and supervise at the graduate level; contribute to research, admissions, examining, assessment; and to the academic administration of OSGA and the College.

The post-holder will have an office for research and teaching in the Oxford School of Global and Area Studies, 11 Bevington Road. The successful candidate will devote most of their time to a unique and exciting multi-disciplinary, cross-regional master's programme in Global and Area Studies established in 2021 at the University of Oxford.

In addition to acting as Director of the GAS programme, the post holder will contribute to core and option teaching in Global and Area Studies. They will also provide master's and doctoral supervision.

This position is full-time and, subject to successful completion of the probationary period, permanent.

The post is tenable from the start of the 2025/26 academic year or as soon as possible thereafter and applications from those at an early, mid, or advanced career stage are welcome. This is a joint appointment with St Antony's College, where the appointee will be a member of both OSGA and St Antony's Governing Body and a non-tutorial fellow of the College.

Applications for the post will be invited from Area Studies specialists who undertake outstanding regionally contextualised social science research into issues of global importance. This research should make use of comparative/transnational approaches and/or engage with key "disciplinary" Area Studies debates. We particularly welcome applications from candidates conducting research into one or more transnational issues, for example democratization, migration, gender, health, environment or trade. Candidate's research should cover more than one country, and ideally cross the boundaries of two or more OSGA programmes. In particular, we are seeking candidates whose research addresses the world regions covered by the school, with preference given to Africa, China, Japan, Latin America and/or the Middle East. We would also welcome applications from candidates whose research engages with the conceptual and methodological challenges of conducting Area Studies through a global lens. We seek a candidate who has teaching experience on comparative and/or transnational issues, as well as the experience needed to administer an Area Studies programme with a global, transnational and comparative focus. A mentor will be appointed to advise the post-holder.

If you would like to discuss this post and find out more about joining the academic community at Oxford, please contact Professor Paul Chaisty, Head of OSGA, at paul.chaisty@politics.ox.ac.uk. All enquiries will be treated in strict confidence and will not form part of the selection decision.

The role of Associate Professor at Oxford

Associate Professor is the main academic career grade at Oxford with a focus on research and teaching, spanning the full range of professor grades in the USA. Associate Professors are appointed jointly by a University department/faculty and an Oxford college, and you will have a contract with both.

Associate Professors are full members of University departments/faculties and college governing bodies playing a role in the democratic governance of the University and their college. You will join a lively, intellectually stimulating and multi-disciplinary community which performs to the highest international levels in research and teaching, with extraordinary levels of innovation, creativity and entrepreneurship.

There is considerable flexibility in the organisation of duties, with three 8-week teaching terms and generous sabbatical leave to balance teaching and research (please see the Benefits, Terms and Conditions section for further details of sabbatical leave). There is the potential for temporary changes to the balance of duties between College and University to enable a focus on different aspects of work at different stages in your career.

Oxford offers many opportunities for professional development in research and teaching. Associate Professors may apply for the title of full Professor in annual exercises. If the title is conferred, you will also have access to professorial merit pay opportunities. In exceptional cases, the title of full Professor may be awarded on appointment.

Appointments are confirmed as permanent on successful completion of a review during the first five years. The vast majority of Associate Professors successfully complete this initial review.

Duties of the post

The main duties of the post are as follows:

Research and public engagement

- To engage in intellectually exciting research and publications, working with students and colleagues to develop the field in new directions, encourage research achievement, and nurture a research culture among junior colleagues and research students;
- To maintain a successful publication record (appropriate to the stage of career, and accounting for career breaks) and contribute to the University's REF submission;
- To engage in advanced regionally contextualised social science research into issues of global importance;
- To identify new areas of research, obtain external funding for research, lead research projects and collaborate with academic colleagues, contributing to the School's reputation for research excellence;
- To develop and submit grant proposals to support their own research portfolio and contribute to the growth of the University's distinctive areas of expertise;
- To disseminate research through publication in high impact journals, participation in international conferences and seminars, and through other media;
- To contribute to the impact of research in policy and/or practice and the development of impact cases for future research assessment exercises as appropriate, and to promote awareness of the subject within and beyond academia (e.g. museums, the media, schools);

- To engage in knowledge exchange with a wide range of policy makers, practitioners and other non-academic stakeholders, and to design research with these stakeholders in mind;
- To contribute to the wider intellectual life of the Oxford School of Global and Area Studies;

Teaching and supervision

- To act as Director of the MPhil (master's) Global and Area Studies Programme;
- To participate in the development and implementation of taught master's and doctoral degree programmes, including supervising and examining graduate students;
- To give high-quality lectures, classes and tutorials at graduate level including:
 - Master's research methods teaching in social sciences;
 - Contribute to core and option teaching in GAS;
- To participate in master's and doctoral supervision of graduate students in OSGA under the direction of the Head of School, the Director of Graduate Studies, and the relevant Course Directors;
- To contribute to the recruitment, admission, and training of high calibre graduate students;
- To engage in University examining.

OSGA use 'stint units' to measure teaching and supervision contributions up to a maximum of 288 teaching units per year. The amount of teaching normally must not exceed an average of 288 teaching units¹ per year without approval by the divisional board.

Departments' general duties

- To engage positively and proactively with the academic community in OSGA, and to play an active role in the administrative work of OSGA;
- To create, organize and participate in Oxford University wide conferences, workshops and other intellectual and cultural events in collaborations with other institutions of the University, including the Division of Social Sciences;
- To contribute to the development and delivery of the curriculum portfolio including teaching, assessment and quality enhancement in interdisciplinary and/or specialist modules;

¹ Departments use 'stint units' to measure teaching and supervision contributions and, overall, the level of expected teaching and supervision is equivalent to a standard two-two teaching load in North America. Various amounts of stint are assigned to different teaching and supervision activities, for example, supervision of a doctoral student counts for 24 stint units per year, and lectures, tutorials, class teaching all count towards stint (one hour paired tutorial, 1 unit; one hour lecture, 3 units; one doctoral student, 24 units; and other types of teaching to be weighted proportionally). This tariff is subject to local variation.

- To take part in University examining for graduates as and when requested to do so;
- To participate in and organise seminars for OSGA and St. Antony's College, and to contribute towards other College activities, proportionate to the balance of the role.
- To co-operate in the administrative work of OSGA in both term and vacation under the direction of the Head of School. This includes holding leadership positions; committee membership; participation in university academic recruitment exercises, with the appropriate training; outreach activities, such as University 'open days';
- To commit to equality and diversity values embraced by the School and the College.

College duties and responsibilities

In addition to the duties relating to the University side of the post, the appointee will be a Fellow of St Antony's College, and will be expected to:

- Take on a small number of College Advisees;
- Play an active role in the academic and research life of the College, for example by organising and/or attending seminars, workshops and other academic activities and events.

From time to time, Fellows may be asked to undertake specific administrative duties for which they would be separately remunerated.

All Fellows are appointed as Trustees of the College and a full induction into your charity trustee role will be provided. As a Trustee, you will be a member of the College's Governing Body which normally meets twice each term.

Selection criteria

Your application will be judged only against the criteria which are set out below. You should ensure that your application shows clearly how your skills and experience meet these criteria.

The University is committed to fairness, consistency and transparency in selection decisions. Members of selection committees will be aware of the principles of equality of opportunity, fair selection and the risks of bias. There will be both female and male committee members wherever possible.

If, for any reason, you have taken a career break or have had an atypical career and wish to disclose this in your application, the selection committee will take this into account, recognising that the quantity of your research may be reduced as a result.

Essential Criteria

- Have, or be close to completing, a doctorate in a social science field relevant to contemporary Global and Area Studies. Candidates must have received their doctorate before 1 October 2025;
- An excellent publication record in Global and Area Studies, commensurate with the candidate's career stage;
- An outstanding programme of innovative research on topics related to Global and Area Studies, namely regionally contextualised social science research into issues of global importance, which make use of comparative/transnational approaches and/or engage with key "disciplinary" Area Studies debates;
- Research covering more than one country, and ideally across the boundaries of two or more OSGA programmes, with preference given to candidates with expertise on Africa, China, Japan, Latin America and/or the Middle East;
- Teaching experience on comparative and/or transnational issues, as well as the experience needed to administer an Area Studies programme with a global, transnational and comparative focus;
- Demonstrated expertise in Area Studies and Social Science research methods sufficient to conduct advanced research and teach graduate students, and an ability to teach introductory research methods;
- A demonstrated record of, or clear potential for, excellence in teaching, syllabus and curriculum development on topics within the remit of OSGA's postgraduate degree programmes;
- The ability and willingness to provide supervision and graduate mentoring for high-achieving graduate students who come from diverse disciplinary and cultural backgrounds, and the ability to relate well and appropriately in graduate supervision and in pastoral situations;
- Demonstrated ability to collaborate with colleagues from a range of different disciplines;
- Outstanding interpersonal and communication skills, including the ability to communicate with non-academic audiences;
- The skills and commitment to contribute effectively to the administration and management of OSGA as a leading centre of teaching and research;
- A willingness to contribute to the life of the College;
- A firm commitment to promoting awareness and understanding of equality, diversity and inclusion and embedding these principles among staff and students.

Desirable Criteria

- An understanding of the needs of and/or experience of working with an ethnically diverse population;
- A track record of research into one or more transnational issues, for example democratization, migration, gender, health, environment or trade;

- A track record of research that engages with the conceptual and methodological challenges of conducting Area Studies through a global lens;
- A track record of successful research grant applications or evidence of the potential to obtain and sustain peer-reviewed research funding;
- Experience of supervising graduate students;
- A demonstrated record of impact in research through engaging with stakeholders beyond academia.

Teaching commitments are mainly concentrated into Oxford's three 8-week teaching terms, making it easier to balance teaching and research. There is considerable flexibility in the organisation of duties, and generous sabbatical leave.

The Oxford School of Global and Area Studies

The School is committed to understanding cultural, economic, political and social questions through the study of world regions in local, global and comparative contexts. OSGA delivers world leading, multi-disciplinary programmes of teaching and research across Africa, China, Latin America, the Middle East, Japan, Russia and Eastern Europe, and South Asia.

Oxford's School of Global and Area Studies (OSGA) one of the largest communities of Area Studies scholars anywhere in the world. We have research and teaching programmes dedicated to Africa, China, Latin America, the Middle East, Japan, Russia and Eastern Europe, South Asia and Comparative Area Studies.

The administration of the School is based at 12 Bevington Road, with colleagues also providing administrative support across a number of locations in which the School's constituent units are based (including the Nissan Institute of Japanese Studies at St Antony's College and the University of Oxford China Centre at St Hugh's College).

The School is devoted to research and graduate teaching in academic disciplines which attempt to understand the complexity and the interrelatedness of society through anthropology, economics, politics, history, sociology and culture. Its teaching and research seek to take into account both the insights provided by the separate disciplines and the contextualisation provided by in-depth knowledge of specific regions and countries. Interdisciplinary collaboration to study specific social processes is encouraged, and a distinctive feature of the School is the number of its academic staff who hold joint appointments in the School and a disciplinary department in the Social Sciences or Humanities Divisions. In the most recent national research quality assessment exercise (REF2021), Area Studies at Oxford – comprising staff in the School and the Faculty of Oriental Studies in the Humanities Division - was judged to account for more world-leading (4*) research than any other Area Studies department in the UK.

The School admits around 160 graduate students a year on Masters and DPhil programmes, across the African Studies Centre, Latin American Centre, the Nissan Institute of Japanese Studies, Russian and East European Studies, Contemporary South Asia, Contemporary Chinese Studies, Middle East Studies, and the Comparative Master's programme in Global and Area Studies. Additionally, the School's academic staff supervise doctoral students.

The School holds a bronze Athena Swan award to recognise advancement of gender equality: representation, progression and success for all.

Global and Area Studies at OSGA

The post-holder will be a member of a unique, multi-disciplinary Global Area Studies Programme, one of eight teaching and research programmes at the School. The MPhil in Global and Area Studies (GAS) was launched in 2021 as a new addition to the OSGA area-specific programmes. We offer a 21-month programme and draw on the multidisciplinary and regional expertise of the seven regional centres of OSGA to deliver an innovative comparative area studies programme that addresses contemporary global challenges through the development of innovative multidisciplinary approaches. In addition to the core GAS faculty, other OSGA academics contribute to GAS teaching and supervision. We work closely with OSGA academics and administrators.

For further information, please visit: MPhil \(GAS\) and DPhil \(Area Studies\) websites.

The Social Sciences Division

The University's academic departments and faculties are organised into four large groups known as Academic Divisions (Social Sciences, Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences (MPLS), Medical Sciences, and Humanities). The divisions are responsible for academic strategy and operational planning, oversight of the teaching and research of their constituent departments and faculties, and for personnel and resource management. The social sciences at Oxford are distinctive for both their depth and breadth, with over 1,100 academic and research staff working across fifteen departments, faculties and schools. The Head of the Social Sciences Division is Professor Timothy Power.

The Division is a world-leading centre of research and education in the social sciences. The Times Higher Education (THE) University Rankings returned the University of Oxford to the number one spot in the world for Social Sciences in 2024. We have placed first in four of the last five years (2019, 2021, 2022 & 2023).

More than 800 researchers were returned to Main Panel C (Social Sciences) for REF 2021 across a diverse range of subject area 'units of assessment' – from geography and business to archaeology and law. Over 55% of the research submitted from the Division was judged to be world-leading (4*, the highest score available). More than two-thirds (69%) of the research's impact was also recognised as world-leading (4*). Research from across the Division was also submitted to subject areas across Panels A (Medicine, health and life sciences), B (Physical sciences, engineering and mathematics), and D (Arts and Humanities), highlighting the enormous breadth and diversity of research expertise across the Division.

Our academic and research staff and students are international thought leaders, generating new evidence, insights and policy tools with which to address some of the major global challenges facing humanity, such as sustainable resource management, poverty and forced migration, effective governance and justice. Particular research highlights in recent years have included COVID-19 and Climate Change. As well as active interdisciplinary links with researchers in other divisions at Oxford, we engage and collaborate extensively with other universities and a wide range of governmental and non-governmental practitioner communities such as law, business, public health and welfare, international development and education around the world. The Division has an extensive portfolio of external funders, partners and supporters, with competitively-awarded external research income exceeding £50 million per year and philanthropic income over £25 million a year.

As part of our commitment to equality of opportunity, thirteen of our departments have achieved Bronze awards under the Athena Swan Charter (a UK accreditation scheme recognising organisations' commitment to equality and diversity, particularly in gender). Our School of Geography and the Environment holds an Athena Swan Silver award. In February 2023, for the first time, the University as a whole was awarded an institutional Athena Swan Silver award, acknowledging the progress that has been made in addressing a number of gender gaps across the University over the last five years.

The Division delivers an exceptional range of high-quality educational programmes all underpinned by the innovative research being undertaken by our academics. The student body is made up of over 2,000 undergraduate students, nearly 3,000 students studying postgraduate taught programmes and 1,200 postgraduate research students. The programmes we offer are wide-ranging, often interdisciplinary and include professionally-oriented provision in areas such as business, law and education. The Division is home to several of Oxford's most widely recognised teaching programmes, such as Philosophy, Politics and Economics (PPE) at undergraduate level; and at the Masters level programmes such as the Bachelor in Civil Law (BCL), Environmental Change and Management, International Relations, and Social Data Science.

About St Antony's College

St Antony's College is one of the seven colleges of the University of Oxford which admit graduate students only. St Antony's chosen field is the interdisciplinary study of the modern history, politics, international relations, economics, sociology and culture of the regions of the world. It provides an informal and multicultural environment for advanced research and postgraduate education and has become the leading European centre for international studies, competing with the best graduate schools in the United States.

Like other Oxford colleges, the College is an independent self-governing institution. Its Governing Body consists of around 40 Fellows and is chaired by the Head of the College (known as the Warden). The Fellows are distinguished scholars in their chosen fields and most of them hold senior academic posts in the University. Each conducts their own research programme and almost all of them supervise postgraduate students from St Antony's and other colleges. Some Fellows teach undergraduates as well and also take part in University and College administration.

The current Warden, Professor Roger Goodman, was a student at the College. Immediately before becoming Warden, he was Head of the Social Sciences Division at Oxford between 2008-17. He was Chair and President of the Academy of Social Sciences between 2016-21.

The College has seven regional study centres, which cover Africa, Asia (except Japan), Europe, Japan, Latin America, the Middle East, Russia and the rest of the former Soviet Union. Most of the Centres are based on the College's campus in converted Victorian houses. Each Centre is run by a Centre Director who is normally a Governing Body Fellow of the College.

About the University of Oxford

Oxford's departments and colleges aim to lead the world in research and education for the benefit of society both in the UK and globally. Oxford's researchers engage with academic, commercial and cultural partners across the world to stimulate high-quality research and enable innovation through a broad range of social, policy and economic impacts.

Oxford's self-governing community of international scholars includes Professors, Associate Professors, other college tutors, senior and junior research fellows and a large number University research staff. Research at Oxford combines disciplinary depth with an increasing focus on inter-disciplinary and multi-disciplinary activities addressing a rich and diverse range of issues.

Oxford's strengths lie both in empowering individuals and teams to address fundamental questions of global significance, and in providing all staff with a welcoming and inclusive workplace that supports everyone to develop and do their best work. Recognising that diversity is a great strength, and vital for innovation and creativity, Oxford aspires to build a truly inclusive community which values and respects every individual's unique contribution.

While Oxford has long traditions of scholarship, it is also forward-looking, creative and cutting-edge. Oxford is one of Europe's most entrepreneurial universities. It consistently has the highest external research income of any university in the UK (the most recent figures are available at www.ox.ac.uk/about/organisation/finance-and-funding), and regularly creates spinout companies based on academic research generated within and owned by the University. Oxford is also recognised as a leading supporter of social enterprise.

Oxford has a strong postgraduate student body, who are attracted to Oxford by the international standing of the faculty, by the rigorous intellectual training on offer, by the excellent research and laboratory facilities available, and by the resources of the museums and libraries, including one of the world's greatest libraries, the Bodleian.

- College IT support in ensuring that their devices link with the College's networks, and in troubleshooting simple difficulties. Their computer will be provided by the department;
- Use of the College Library with the right to borrow books when resident in Oxford;
- The opportunity to join the Oxford Colleges' Healthcare scheme as long as it is the College's policy to provide this benefit;²
- Free meals at common table (lunches and evening meals in the College Hall when it is open);
- 12 free High or Guest Night Tables each term. This dining allowance may also be used to host academic and business guests;
- Membership of the College's Senior Common Room;
- Car parking in the College's car parks, which is normally available if they live more than three miles from the College.

Offer of employment

Applications for this post will be considered by a selection committee containing representatives from both OSGA and St Antony's College. The selection committee is responsible for conducting all aspects of the recruitment and selection process; it does not, however, have the authority to make the final decision as to who should be appointed. The final decision will be made by the Social Sciences divisional board and the Governing Body of St Antony's College on the basis of a recommendation made by the selection committee. No offer of appointment will be valid, therefore, until and unless the recommendation has been approved by both the divisional board and the governing body, and a formal contractual offer has been made.

² As there is no charge to the Associate Professor for their participation, this benefit may give rise to a small tax liability. Their dependants may also join the scheme at the post-holder's expense if eligible.
