The role

The Research Assistant will join a research team lead by Prof Jane Barlow working primarily on the development and implementation of a multidisciplinary research network focused on the developmental recovery of traumatised infants.

The role will involve providing both research and administrative support to a small research team, who have been funded to set up the above network including working with an international group of stakeholders, identification of research priorities, undertaking a scoping search of the literature, setting up and maintaining a webpage, sharing knowledge, and organising in-person and virtual workshops and conferences. There will also be opportunities to contribute to the direction of the network, engage in the writing of grant applications, and prepare academic papers for publication.

You will be required to manage your own workload flexibly with appropriate support, including juggling a number of different tasks as required.

Flexible working

Although the role will be based in Oxford there is opportunity for remote working (within the UK).

Responsibilities

- Manage own research and administrative activities, within guidelines provided by senior colleagues
- Undertake a rigorous literature review
- Liaise with national and international stakeholders to share knowledge
- Set up and maintain a website using a platform such as Mosaic
- Participate with colleagues at RCPCH in the delivery of a James Lind Alliance Research Priority Setting Exercise
- Organise and oversee the delivery of a number of in-person and virtual conferences and workshops
- Contribute to the day-to-day administration of the network
- Represent the research group at external meetings/seminars, either with other members of the group or alone
- Contribute to discussions and share research findings with colleagues in partner institutions, and research groups
- Undertaking such other duties as may be required from time to time that are commensurate with the grade and responsibilities of this post.
- Conducting yourself with due regard to the University Equal Opportunities and Data Protection policies.

Selection criteria

Essential selection criteria

- A graduate qualification in psychology, social sciences or a related discipline
- Working toward a doctorate within the field of children's social care, infant mental health, child welfare policy or a related area
- Knowledge about, and experience of, working in a safeguarding context with young children
- Excellent organisational skills
- Ability to work independently and largely unsupervised in day-to-day running of a research network
- A team player including being approachable, showing good interpersonal skills with people at all levels, both inside and outside the organisation.
- Computer literate i.e., competent in word processing, statistical and database packages.

- Ability to set up and maintain a simple website
- Ability to contribute to the writing of research proposals, reports and papers.
- Enthusiasm for, and commitment to, research that has an impact on social care.

Desirable selection criteria

- Experience of working in a research team and contributing ideas for new research projects
- Experience of writing academic papers and grant applications

Pre-employment screening

Standard checks

If you are offered the post, the offer will be subject to standard pre-employment checks. You will be asked to provide: proof of your right-to-work in the UK; proof of your identity; and (if we haven't done so already) we will contact the referees you have nominated. If you have previously worked for the University we will also verify key information such as your dates of employment and reason for leaving your previous role with the department/unit where you worked. You will also be asked to complete a health declaration so that you can tell us about any health conditions or disabilities for which you may need us to make appropriate adjustments.

Please read the candidate notes on the University's pre-employment screening procedures at:

About the University of Oxford

Welcome to the University of Oxford. We aim to lead the world in research and education for the benefit of society both in the UK and globally. Oxford's researchers engage with academic, commercial and cultural partners across the world to stimulate high-quality research and enable innovation through a broad range of social, policy and economic impacts.

We believe our strengths lie both in empowering individuals and teams to address fundamental questions of global significance, while providing all our staff with a welcoming and inclusive workplace that enables everyone to develop and do their best work. Recognising that diversity is our strength, vital for innovation and creativity, we aspire to build a truly diverse community which values and respects every individual's unique contribution.

While we have long traditions of scholarship, we are also forward-looking, creative and cutting-edge. Oxford is one of Europe's most entrepreneurial universities and we rank first in the UK for university spin-outs, and in recent years we have spun out 15-20 new companies every year. We are also recognised as leaders in support for social enterprise.

Join us and you will find a unique, democratic and international community, a great range of staff benefits and access to a vibrant array of cultural activities in the beautiful city of Oxford.

Department of Social Policy and Intervention

The Department of Social Policy and Intervention is a multidisciplinary, social science centre of excellence for research and teaching in comparative social policy and evidence-based social intervention and policy evaluation. In the UK-wide 2021 Research Excellence Framework (REF), it was a top-five scoring department in the country, across all subjects and universities, with 62 per cent of the Department's research activity classified as 'world leading' (4*) with a further 30 per cent classed as 'internationally excellent' (3*). In the most recent QS World University Rankings by Subject (2022) the Department ranked second in Social Policy and Administration globally.

The Department has undergone substantial transformation in recent years. This renewal includes the expansion of graduate teaching and supervision in policy evaluation and comparative social policy; significant expansion in research income; and the creation of new research groups and areas of research expertise.

The Department's teaching is largely devoted to graduate students. It offers master's degrees in Comparative Social Policy (CSP) and in Evidence-Based Social Intervention and Policy Evaluation (EBSIPE). Students may study for either a one-year MSc or a two-year MPhil. The Department also offers supervision for doctoral degrees in Social Policy or in Social Intervention and Policy Evaluation. The graduate intake is highly international with students drawn from the United Kingdom, EU member states, and many countries across the world.

Research within the Department is largely organised under the auspices of two main research groups:

- The Centre for Evidence-Based Intervention (CEBI)
- The Oxford Institute of Social Policy (OISP)

More information about the department can be found at www.spi.ox.ac.uk.

The Department of Social Policy and Intervention holds a bronze Athena Swan award to recognise advancement of gender equality: representation, progression and success for all.

Social Sciences Division

The University's academic departments and faculties are organised into four large groups known as Academic Divisions (Social Sciences, Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences (MPLS), Medical Sciences, and Humanities). The divisions are responsible for academic strategy and operational planning, oversight of the teaching and research of their constituent departments and faculties, and for personnel and resource management. The social sciences at Oxford are distinctive for both their depth and breadth, with over 1,100 academic and research staff working across fifteen departments, faculties and schools. The Head of the Social Sciences Division is Professor Timothy Power.

The Division is a world-leading centre of research and education in the social sciences. The Times Higher Education (THE) University Rankings returned the University of Oxford to the number one spot in the world for Social Sciences in 2022. We have placed first in three of the last five years (2018, 2019 and 2022).

More than 800 researchers were returned to Main Panel C (Social Sciences) for REF 2021 across a diverse range of subject area 'units of assessment' – from geography and business to archaeology and law. Over 55% of the research submitted from the Division was judged to be world-leading (4*, the highest score available). More than two-thirds (69%) of the research's impact was also recognised as world-leading (4*). Research from across the Division was also submitted to subject areas across Panels A (Medicine, health and life sciences), B (Physical sciences, engineering and mathematics), and D (Arts and Humanities), highlighting the enormous breadth and diversity of research expertise across the Division.

Our academic and research staff and students are international thought leaders, generating new evidence, insights and policy tools with which to address some of the major global challenges facing humanity, such as sustainable resource management, poverty and forced migration, effective governance and justice. Particular research highlights in recent years have included COVID-19 and Climate Change. As well as active interdisciplinary links with researchers in other divisions at Oxford, we engage and collaborate extensively with other universities and a wide range of governmental and non-governmental practitioner communities such as law, business, public health and welfare, international development and education around the world. The Division has an extensive portfolio of external funders, partners and supporters, with competitively-awarded external research income exceeding £50 million per year and philanthropic income over £25 million a year.

As part of our commitment to equality of opportunity, eleven of our departments have achieved Bronze awards under the Athena Swan Charter (a UK accreditation scheme recognising organisations' commitment to equality and diversity, particularly in gender). Our School of Geography and the Environment holds an Athena Swan Silver award. In February 2023, for the first time, the University as a whole was awarded an institutional Athena Swan Silver award, acknowledging the progress that has been made in addressing a number of gender gaps across the University over the last five years.

The Division delivers an exceptional range of high-quality educational programmes all underpinned by the innovative research being undertaken by our academics. The student body is made up of over 2,000 undergraduate students, nearly 3,000 students studying postgraduate taught programmes and 1,200 postgraduate research students. The programmes we offer are wide-ranging, often interdisciplinary and include professionally-oriented provision in areas such as business, law and education. The Division is home to several of Oxford's most widely recognised teaching programmes, such as Philosophy, Politics and Economics (PPE) at undergraduate level; and at the Masters level programmes such as the Bachelor in Civil Law (BCL), Environmental Change and Management, International Relations, and Social Data Science.
