About GPI

The Global Parenting Initiative (GPI) aims to meet the urgent need for scaled-up and sustained evidence-based interventions that promote playful parenting and learning through play, and prevent sexual, physical, and emotional violence against children in the Global South. This five-year $21 million grant is led by the University of Oxford, in collaboration with other universities in the UK, South Africa, Malaysia, Philippines, Tanzania, Thailand, and Uganda.

The GPI builds upon the previous work of Professor Jamie Lachman, Professor Lucie Cluver, and Professor Frances Gardner, co-founders of the Parenting for Lifelong Health (PLH) initiative to develop, test, and widely disseminate a suite of open-access, non-commercialised, and low-cost parenting programmes to reduce violence against children and improve child wellbeing in low- and middle-income countries. These programmes have been developed and rigorously tested through a collaboration between the World Health Organization, UNICEF, and the Universities of Oxford, Cape Town, Bangor and Stellenbosch. The GPI will further scale up these programmes in over 20 low- and middle-income countries across Sub-Saharan Africa, South-eastern Europe, Southeast Asia, and the Caribbean.

More information on the Global Parenting Initiative can be found at www.globalparenting.org.

The role

The Research Support Assistant position offers an opportunity to work with a research group led by Professor Jamie Lachman on the research of parenting interventions in low- and middle-income countries. The Research Support Assistant will contribute to a research project focused on developing a construct to measure parental engagement in Learning Through Play (LTP). The primary aim of this project is to establish a robust framework for measuring parental engagement in LTP while gaining a deeper understanding of its contributing factors and the potential impact of parenting interventions. This will be achieved through the utilisation of data from GPI studies conducted across multiple countries in the Global South. The Research Support Assistant will provide general research management support and play a key role in assisting with data pooling tasks, ensuring data quality, and contributing to the project's analytical processes. The postholder will report to the GPI Head of Research as part of an international research team with wide policy and programming impact.

Flexible working

The post will be based in Oxford with the potential for hybrid working within the UK.

Responsibilities

- Provide general research management support, ensuring the smooth coordination of research activities and adherence to project timelines.
- Support the harmonisation and standardisation of datasets from various GPI studies.
- Assist in data integration and cleaning to ensure accuracy and consistency.
- Conduct basic descriptive and exploratory data analysis as needed.
- Support the efficient management of data, including secure storage, organisation, and accessibility for project members.
- Contribute to donor reports and papers for publications ensuring clarity, accuracy, and alignment with research findings.
- Document data processing steps and ensure reproducibility of workflows.
- Collaborate with the research team to discuss and troubleshoot data-related challenges.
- Assist in preparing reports, summaries, and visualisations based on the pooled data.
- Work as part of a research team within and outside of Oxford University, engaged in a linked set of studies focusing on parenting programmes in low- and middle-income countries.
- Manage own time and prioritise tasks independently, balancing multiple research activities while adhering to project deadlines.
- Make informed decisions within the scope of data processing and analysis, seeking guidance from senior researchers when required.

Selection criteria

Essential selection criteria

- Master's degree (or currently enrolled in a Master's programme) in a relevant field, such as social sciences, statistics, psychology, public health, or related disciplines.
- Prior experience in data integration, including extracting and merging variables from different databases using statistical software (e.g., R).
- Proficiency in R, particularly for data cleaning and pooling.
- Strong academic writing skills, with the ability to conduct data visualisation and summarise data effectively.
- Excellent organisational and time management skills, with the ability to meet tight deadlines.
- Strong communication skills, including the ability to produce publishable written work, present data at conferences, and represent the research group in meetings.

- Excellent teamwork skills, with the ability to independently manage research and administrative tasks.

Desirable selection criteria

- Interest in parenting, child development, and family support research.
- Familiarity with parenting behaviour measurement tools (e.g., CBCL, PSI).
- Experience in psychometric research, including the validation and adaptation of measurement tools.

Pre-employment screening

Standard checks

If you are offered the post, the offer will be subject to standard pre-employment checks. You will be asked to provide: proof of your right-to-work in the UK; proof of your identity; and (if we haven't done so already) we will contact the referees you have nominated. If you have previously worked for the University we will also verify key information such as your dates of employment and reason for leaving your previous role with the department/unit where you worked. You will also be asked to complete a health declaration so that you can tell us about any health conditions or disabilities for which you may need us to make appropriate adjustments.

Please read the candidate notes on the University's pre-employment screening procedures at: https://www.jobs.ox.ac.uk/pre-employment-checks

About the University of Oxford

Welcome to the University of Oxford. We aim to lead the world in research and education for the benefit of society both in the UK and globally. Oxford's researchers engage with academic, commercial and cultural partners across the world to stimulate high-quality research and enable innovation through a broad range of social, policy and economic impacts.

We believe our strengths lie both in empowering individuals and teams to address fundamental questions of global significance, while providing all our staff with a welcoming and inclusive workplace that enables everyone to develop and do their best work. Recognising that diversity is our strength, vital for innovation and creativity, we aspire to build a truly diverse community which values and respects every individual's unique contribution.

While we have long traditions of scholarship, we are also forward-looking, creative and cutting-edge. Oxford is one of Europe's most entrepreneurial universities and we rank first in the UK for university spin-outs, and in recent years we have spun out 15-20 new companies every year. We are also recognised as leaders in support for social enterprise.

Join us and you will find a unique, democratic and international community, a great range of staff benefits and access to a vibrant array of cultural activities in the beautiful city of Oxford.

Department of Social Policy and Intervention

The Department of Social Policy and Intervention is a multidisciplinary, social science centre of excellence for research and teaching in comparative social policy and evidence-based social intervention and policy evaluation. In the UK-wide 2021 Research Excellence Framework (REF), it was a top-five scoring department in the country, across all subjects and universities, with 62 per cent of the Department's research activity classified as 'world leading' (4*) with a further 30 per cent classed as 'internationally excellent' (3*). In the most recent QS World University Rankings by Subject (2022) the Department ranked second in Social Policy and Administration globally.

The Department has undergone substantial transformation in recent years. This renewal includes the expansion of graduate teaching and supervision in policy evaluation and comparative social policy; significant expansion in research income; and the creation of new research groups and areas of research expertise.

The Department's teaching is largely devoted to graduate students. It offers master's degrees in Comparative Social Policy (CSP) and in Evidence-Based Social Intervention and Policy Evaluation (EBSIPE). Students may study for either a one-year MSc or a two-year MPhil. The Department also offers supervision for doctoral degrees in Social Policy or in Social Intervention and Policy Evaluation. The graduate intake is highly international with students drawn from the United Kingdom, EU member states, and many countries across the world.

Research within the Department is largely organised under the auspices of two main research groups:

- The Centre for Evidence-Based Intervention (CEBI)
- The Oxford Institute of Social Policy (OISP)

More information about the department can be found at www.spi.ox.ac.uk.

The Department of Social Policy and Intervention holds a bronze Athena Swan award to recognise advancement of gender equality: representation, progression and success for all.

Social Sciences Division

The University's academic departments and faculties are organised into four large groups known as Academic Divisions (Social Sciences, Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences (MPLS), Medical Sciences, and Humanities). The divisions are responsible for academic strategy and operational planning, oversight of the teaching and research of their constituent departments and faculties, and for personnel and resource management. The social sciences at Oxford are distinctive for both their depth and breadth, with over 1,100 academic and research staff working across fifteen departments, faculties and schools. The Head of the Social Sciences Division is Professor Timothy Power.

The Division is a world-leading centre of research and education in the social sciences. The Times Higher Education (THE) University Rankings returned the University of Oxford to the number one spot in the world for Social Sciences in 2024. We have placed first in four of the last five years (2019, 2021, 2022 & 2023).

More than 800 researchers were returned to Main Panel C (Social Sciences) for REF 2021 across a diverse range of subject area 'units of assessment' – from geography and business to archaeology and law. Over 55% of the research submitted from the Division was judged to be world-leading (4*, the highest score available). More than two-thirds (69%) of the research's impact was also recognised as world-leading (4*). Research from across the Division was also submitted to subject areas across Panels A (Medicine, health and life sciences), B (Physical sciences, engineering and mathematics), and D (Arts and Humanities), highlighting the enormous breadth and diversity of research expertise across the Division.

Our academic and research staff and students are international thought leaders, generating new evidence, insights and policy tools with which to address some of the major global challenges facing humanity, such as sustainable resource management, poverty and forced migration, effective governance and justice. Particular research highlights in recent years have included COVID-19 and Climate Change. As well as active interdisciplinary links with researchers in other divisions at Oxford, we engage and collaborate extensively with other universities and a wide range of governmental and non-governmental practitioner communities such as law, business, public health and welfare, international development and education around the world. The Division has an extensive portfolio of external funders, partners and supporters, with competitively-awarded external research income exceeding £50 million per year and philanthropic income over £25 million a year.

As part of our commitment to equality of opportunity, thirteen of our departments have achieved Bronze awards under the Athena Swan Charter (a UK accreditation scheme recognising organisations' commitment to equality and diversity, particularly in gender). Our School of Geography and the Environment and our Department of Economics hold Athena Swan Silver awards. In February 2023, for the first time, the University as a whole was awarded an institutional Athena Swan Silver award, acknowledging the progress that has been made in addressing a number of gender gaps across the University over the last five years.

The Division delivers an exceptional range of high-quality educational programmes all underpinned by the innovative research being undertaken by our academics. The student body is made up of over 2,000 undergraduate students, nearly 3,000 students studying postgraduate taught programmes and 1,200 postgraduate research students. The programmes we offer are wide-ranging, often interdisciplinary and include professionally-oriented provision in areas such as business, law and education. The Division is home to several of Oxford's most widely recognised teaching programmes, such as Philosophy, Politics and Economics (PPE) at undergraduate level; and at the Masters level programmes such as the Bachelor in Civil Law (BCL), Environmental Change and Management, International Relations, and Social Data Science.
